PREFACE

This Directory is based on a questionnaire sent to all forestry research organizations in the mailing lists of FAO and IUFRO. The initial responses were compiled into a Draft Directory dated August 1992.

Copies of the Draft Directory were mailed to all the organizations which had responded, with a request for amendments and updated information. In addition, IUFRO country representatives were requested to help in locating research organizations that had been missed. Even so, we are aware that the present Directory is not complete, but two years have already passed since the start of this effort and to delay publication in the hope of locating all organizations will only result in the obsolescence of the information already in hand. We intend to deal with new information by producing new editions from time to time. Those organizations which have been missed are requested to send in details for the next edition, using a copy of the form provided at the back of this publication.

The format of this Directory has been made deliberately simple. Although computers make data-processing easy, data entry remains time-consuming, expensive and error-prone. Also, data that is voluminous tends itself to be the cause of publication-delay and data-obsolescence. We have accordingly opted for the minimum data needed to facilitate contacts between forestry research organizations. This is where the need is greatest. Other kinds of information can be obtained by direct contact, once the communications channels have been established.

FAO and FORESTRY

Founded in 1945, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) is assigned four main tasks by its Constitution:

- * to collect, analyse, interpret and disseminate information;
- * to advise governments on technical and policy matters;
- * to provide a neutral forum for international discussion and dialogue;
- * to provide technical assistance at the request of member governments.

The constitution designates forestry as an integral part of overall agricultural development. Today, FAO - through its Forestry Department - is the leading international organization dealing with forestry.

THE FORESTRY DEPARTMENT

The FAO Forestry Department promotes national and international action for the conservation, management and sustainable use of forests, trees and related resources as an integral element of overall socioeconomic development and environmental protection. Currently, the Department has five main objectives:

- * to assist countries enhance the productivity and sustained use of forest and tree resources, with a view to maximizing their contribution to rural and socio-economic development;
- * to promote the conservation of forest ecosystems and the integration of forests and trees into land-use systems;
- * to assist in increasing the value of forest production - both wood and non-wood;
- * to support full participation in and equitable sharing of benefits among all people dependent on forestry activities, particularly the most vulnerable groups;
- * to provide policy and planning advice to national forestry administrations.

These objectives apply equally to work at FAO Headquarters in Rome Italy, and to the forestry field programme with approximately 300 projects in more than 90 countries in the developing world.

THE INTERNATIONAL UNION OF FORESTRY RESEARCH ORGANIZATIONS and its SPECIAL PROGRAMME FOR DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

IUFRO is a non-profit, non-governmental international research organization established in 1892. Its objectives are to promote international cooperation in forestry and forest products research and standardization of research techniques.

IUFRO includes more than 15,000 scientists from over 710 member organizations in more than 110 countries. It serves as a forum for the exchange of knowledge and experiences in forestry research at the national and international levels.

IUFRO has placed increasing emphasis on problems of global concern, for which special units may be created. One of these is the Special Programme for Developing Countries (SPDC).

SPDC was established in 1983 as a special arm of IUFRO. It aims to promote improvement of forestry research in less developed countries through special-purpose activities.

SPDC is an active member of the international programme for assistance in forestry research. As well, it is a strong component of the overall IUFRO programme, fostering the activities of IUFRO while meeting its mandate of research improvement through training programmes, workshops, information services, liaison and collaboration.

SPDC's tasks are to identify priority forestry problems, to increase the ability of forest scientists in less developed countries to conduct quality research, to facilitate information flows to forest scientists, and to assemble funds for a programme of general assistance to forestry research in the developing world.

With evolving world needs, the challenges for the SPDC change. Its aim of promoting improvement of forestry research in less developed countries, however, remains unaltered.
